Mental Health and Recovery Services
Board of Allen, Auglaize, and Hardin Counties

Strategic Plan 2015 - 2020

“A BluePrint for Ohio’s Community Mental Health and Addiction System”
The Mental Health and Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize, and Hardin counties is adopting the document - Recovery is Beautiful: A BluePrint for Ohio’s Community Mental Health and Addiction System as its own five year plan for moving its local mental health and addiction system, in a statewide effort, from one that focuses on acute care to one that focuses on recovery management to help individuals not only get well, but to stay well.

Mental illness and addiction are chronic diseases, and recovery is about the evolution of an individual from a state of disease, to a state of wellness. True recovery is about much more than just a person’s physical wellbeing, recovery is about a person’s total wellbeing; physical, mental, emotional, and spiritual. We know that individuals with a mental illness and/or addiction want what everyone wants; they want a home, a job, friends, and to go out and socialize like everyone else.

Individuals in recovery will tell you that Recovery is Beautiful; and that it has allowed them to live their lives as opposed to experiencing it from the sidelines. This is what this BluePrint sets out to accomplish -- ensuring systems of care throughout Ohio that will allow all Ohioans to have the best chance possible to live a healthy and full life as contributing members of their local communities.

Moving our local system of care to a Recovery Oriented System of Care will take time and the involvement of all the stakeholders in our communities to ensure that our local system of care is focused on the individuals and families in need of mental health and addiction services. Our Recovery Oriented Systems of Care will also focus on sustaining a recovery management network to help individuals sustain long term recovery and live full lives in their communities.

We know for a fact that Treatment Works, and People Recover. However, we also know that in order for individuals to have the best chance to sustain recovery for the long term, we need to ensure that recovery supports such as housing, peer supports, employment supports, and transportation are available for individuals with a mental illness and/or addiction. We also know that for communities to be healthy, we need to start early with prevention and wellness programs and continue to offer ongoing services and supports throughout a person’s life.

This BluePrint will have us working in partnership with individuals in recovery and their families, healthcare and behavioral healthcare providers, local county systems such as education, criminal justice, law enforcement, health and human services, elected officials, businesses, faith-based organizations, and community members. No other issues impact entire communities quite like mental illness and addiction do.

Stay well,

Foreword

All people need to have the tools necessary to live a mentally healthy and addiction free life. The Recovery is Beautiful BluePrint is intended to move our community mental health and addiction system towards a Recovery Oriented System of Care (ROSC). ROSC will promote good health through prevention and wellness programs, and provide crisis intervention, treatment, and recovery supports when individuals experience a mental health or substance abuse problem.

This BluePrint sets out a framework in which the Mental Health and Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize, and Hardin Counties (MHRSB) is the Recovery Oriented System of Care “hub” for each of our local communities that coordinates across systems to ensure that local entities are prepared to offer community based mental health and addiction services, and recovery supports that are person-centered to meet the needs of individuals working towards recovery.

The funding and delivery of healthcare is changing in Ohio, including mental health and addiction services. Ohioans must continue to have confidence that their publicly funded mental health and addiction continuum of care is working in a way that provides them with programs and services that are cost effective and efficient, ensuring that local community needs are met.

Recovery from a mental illness and/or addiction is not only possible but with the right treatment and long-term recovery supports - it is life changing. While recovery benefits individuals with mental illness and/or addiction, it also benefits families and entire communities. Individuals in recovery become active and valued members of their community, helping communities to become healthier and more vibrant.

This BluePrint sets out a five year plan with overarching goals and action steps designed to make the changes necessary to advance our community mental health and addiction system in the ever changing healthcare landscape of the 21st century. MHRSB is committed to assuring that residents in each community live healthier lives through improved access to quality mental health and addiction prevention, treatment, and recovery support services.

This transition to a Recovery Oriented System of Care is largely driven by the body of research and information demonstrating that recovery-oriented care successfully improves outcomes by getting individuals help earlier and, once they have received professional help, linking them with the services and supports that will increase their likelihood of sustaining their recovery.

The Institute of Medicine has issued two major reports on Recovery Oriented Systems of Care that were foundational in the initial development of Recovery Oriented Systems of Care, they are: Crossing the Quality Chasm (2001) and Improving the Quality of Health Care for Mental and Substance – Use Conditions (2006). The US Department of Health and Human Services Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration released the Guiding Principles and Elements of Recovery-Oriented Systems of Care: What do we know from the research? (2009), and this document lays out the research supporting the framework for a Recovery Oriented System of Care.

In order to support the transition from an acute care treatment model to a recovery management model; systems, communities, and the state must work to align goals and priorities, while also engaging and incorporating client and family support systems to implement Recovery Oriented Systems of Care that utilize the latest scientific research and evidence to implement prevention, treatment, and recovery support services.
Making change is hard and we must evolve with the world around us. Achieving this vision and meeting these goals will require leadership, partnership, and persistence. By working together, Ohio will be a healthier and more vibrant place to live, work, and grow.
The Case for Change

Today’s healthcare environment is changing rapidly, and now is the time for our community mental health and addiction system to look to the future and ensure that all of our communities have a viable system of recovery-oriented services and supports in place for all of their residents. As the healthcare landscape evolves in Ohio and throughout the country, with public and private payers focusing on value over volume with a shifting focus toward paying for outcomes, the mental health and addiction system must also evolve to ensure that individuals are receiving integrated care that is both effective and efficient.

MHRSB serves as a local hub for all public mental health and addiction services. MHRSB continues to assess, plan, and manage prevention, treatment, and recovery support services for their entire community and continue to pay for residents in need of treatment and services who have insufficient healthcare coverage. Additionally, MHRSB is responsible for developing and establishing community-wide task-forces to address emerging mental health and addiction issues, and ensuring a system of recovery supports that foster long-term recovery in individuals with a mental illness and/or addiction, regardless of who pays for the initial treatment.

Severe and persistent mental illness and addiction are long-term, chronic conditions, in which many individuals may need a lifetime of supports to sustain long-term recovery. There are clear benefits from intervening early and providing continued support throughout a person’s life. We know that treatment works and people recover, given access to appropriate treatment and recovery supports.

It is time for our community mental health and addiction system to take advantage of the changing nature of healthcare as well as the national movement toward recovery-based mental health and addiction services by transitioning Ohio’s community alcohol, drug addiction, and mental health service system into a Recovery Oriented System of Care.

A Recovery Oriented System of Care (ROSC) places its primary focus on the individuals in need of recovery services and their family, building on their strengths, and incorporating a coordinated and collaborative approach across the community. A ROSC includes prevention and wellness, intervention, treatment, and recovery supports all focused on getting the individual and their family into recovery, while helping them integrate into the community and workforce. A Recovery Oriented System of Care, at its core, puts people first and works within the local community to promote safe, healthy, and drug-free lifestyles.

This Blueprint outlines a five-year plan for transitioning our community alcohol, drug addiction, and mental health services system forward into a Recovery Oriented System of Care. This ROSC will build on existing strengths and work to improve inherent weaknesses.

A fundamental principle of a Recovery Oriented System of Care, is that clients are key. Clients are the driver of decisions about service and support needs. Services are built and systems are put in place so that individuals are able to access an array of services and supports when and where they need them.

Working towards a Recovery Oriented System of Care will necessitate bringing together local community partners, including clients of services, family members, providers, community leaders, businesses, law enforcement, criminal justice partners, faith-based and veterans organizations, as well as other social, health, and human services partners. It takes the entire community to create a true ROSC. Implementing a ROSC is a great way to not only ensure that appropriate prevention, treatment, and recovery supports are in place, but also to educate the community on mental illness and addiction while reducing stigma and barriers to care.

As discussed in An Integrated Model of Recovery Oriented Behavioral Health Care, a report of the Department of Behavioral Health and Mental Retardation Services, City of Philadelphia: under Recovery-oriented practices and essential components of recovery-oriented systems:

“A recovery–oriented system of behavioral healthcare will offer citizens an array of accessible services and supports from which they will be able to choose those which are most effective and responsive in addressing their particular behavioral health condition or combination of conditions. These services and supports will be culturally appropriate, build on individual, family, and community strengths, and have as their primary and explicit aim promotion of the person’s/family’s resilience, recovery, and inclusion in community life.

Services and supports will be provided in an integrated and coordinated fashion within the context of a locally–managed system of care developed in collaboration with the surrounding community, thereby ensuring continuity of care both over time (e.g., across episodes) and across agency boundaries, and maximizing the person’s opportunities for establishing, or reestablishing, a safe, dignified, and meaningful life in the community of his or her choice.”

NOW IS THE TIME FOR A RECOVERY ORIENTED SYSTEM OF CARE

The time for change is now. At a time when healthcare is changing and clients, families, and communities are adapting to this new environment, the community mental health and addiction services system on which they rely must evolve to provide integrated services and supports that are client-centered, community-based, and recovery-oriented. The following actions, being taken across the state, are but a few reasons that make now the opportune time to move our local alcohol, drug addiction, and mental health system toward a Recovery Oriented System of Care:

- The universal understanding of the importance of client-driven care is growing.
- With healthcare reform comes the recognition that prevention and wellness programs are not only beneficial, but a necessity in improving the health of communities.
- The funding and delivery of healthcare services in Ohio are changing with the implementation of the Affordable Care Act, Medicaid Expansion, MyCare Ohio, and statewide managed care programs.
- Healthcare funders and providers are moving toward the integration of all services, including mental health and addiction.
- Today’s mental health and addiction services are aligned for acute care, while mental illness and addiction are chronic illnesses that necessitate supporting long-term recovery.
- Some services are often duplicated in a given community, while other services are lacking.
- Services and payment models do not always align with a client’s readiness or need for help.
- With funding realignment, the opportunity to move toward a more holistic model of recovery exists.
Defining Recovery

Recovery is not simply about personal health, but the health and well-being of the entire community.

Recovery from alcohol and drug problems is a process of change through which an individual achieves improved health, wellness, and quality of life. (SAMHSA, 2009)

Recovery from mental disorders and/or substance use disorders is a process of change through which individuals improve their health and wellness, live a self-directed life, and strive to reach their full potential. (SAMHSA’s working definition, 2012)

What is a Recovery Oriented System of Care?

Recovery Oriented Systems of Care (ROSC) are networks of formal and informal services developed and mobilized to sustain long-term recovery for individuals and families impacted by severe substance use disorders [and mental illness]. The system in ROSC is not a treatment agency, but a macro-level organization of a community, a state, or a nation. (William White)

What is Recovery Management?

Recovery Management is a philosophy for organizing treatment and recovery support services to enhance pre-recovery engagement, recovery initiation, long-term recovery maintenance, and the quality of personal/family life in long-term recovery. (William White)

Recovery is Beautiful Vision

Ohio’s entire mental health and addiction services system is emphasizing a Recovery Oriented System of Care (ROSC) that capitalizes on community strengths. Ohio’s ROSC shall offer Ohioans an array of accessible mental health and addiction services and recovery supports that are culturally appropriate, accountable, effective, and efficient while promoting individual and family recovery.

MHRSB ensures that individuals and families affected by mental illness and/or addiction have access to this high-quality, recovery oriented system of care. MHRSB, through strong community partnerships, will continue to lead and advance efforts to ensure our communities are healthy, safe, and drug-free, while assuring accountability and effectiveness in client care.
Principles for Boards to Move The Vision Forward

The following five principles are at the forefront of our plan:

Focusing on Clients and Families
Healthcare is personal and is most effective when it’s delivered based on the needs and values of the individual receiving care. A Recovery Oriented System of Care allows individuals and families to drive the mental health and addiction services that they receive within their local community. (Research shows that recovery levels are highest when individuals are fully engaged.)

Ensuring Timely Access to Care
MHRSB will ensure that and resident has access to a continuum of high quality, integrated care that is available in a timely manner for individuals and families in need of treatment and recovery supports.

Promoting Healthy, Safe, and Drug-Free Communities
MHRSB promotes the health, wellness, and safety of individuals and communities by offering a continuum of services that includes prevention, community education, crisis services, treatment, and recovery supports, such as housing, employment supports, and peer support. When individuals are healthy and stable in recovery, they can meet their fullest potential, businesses have access to a healthy, drug-free workforce, and families and communities flourish.

Prioritizing Accountable and Outcome-Driven Financing
Maximizing the use of federal, state, and local funds to meet locally identified outcomes, MHRSB utilizes a blended funding approach that aligns resources and improves coordination between local community stakeholders. This approach enhances accountability and allocates scarce taxpayer dollars in the most efficient and effective manner possible.

Locally Managing Systems of Care
Healthcare is delivered locally, and individuals and communities are best served when the healthcare system is designed and managed locally. Innovation driven at the community level will lead to the implementation of improved mental health and addiction service delivery solutions. By planning for, designing, managing and advocating for adequate financing, MHRSB, working with its local partners, is able to determine what works best in each community. This type of planning and coordinating requires a systems approach and effective collaboration among local stakeholders including schools, law enforcement, child welfare, the courts, human services, healthcare, businesses, and employment services.

The Look of Success

The goal before us in this five-year plan is to transform the existing mental health and addiction system of care into a Recovery Oriented System of Care. We will know we have succeeded when:

• Stigma and social isolation decrease.
• Prevention, early identification, treatment, and recovery are understood, valued, and utilized.
• Services, supports, and decisions are client-centered and client-driven.
• Contracts and payments are based on outcomes, assuring that resources used are justified by the outcomes achieved.
• Ohio moves away from a model focused on acute care to one focused on long term recovery for individuals and their families.
• Boards continue to maximize the utility of public funds by improving the cost efficiency and quality of publicly funded mental health and addiction services.
• All Ohioans have the opportunity to recover, and as a result, Ohio will have healthier, safer communities.
• Increase and sustain recovery rates through improved system access, engagement, and retention in services.
• Treatment works, and people recover.
Recovery is Beautiful

Talk to an individual in sustained recovery and they will tell you that recovery is a beautiful thing. Their life has changed in multiple ways, for the better. Recovery is about the optimism that things can, will, and do get better!

Recovery is about much more than addressing physical issues. True recovery is physical, emotional, and spiritual -- it’s about waking up every morning and making conscience healthy and productive decisions.

To make Ohio a state that lives and breathes Recovery is Beautiful we all have to be passionate about recovery and champion the benefits it provides individuals, their families, and our communities. We have to engage individuals and families in recovery and ask them what works and what doesn’t -- then we need to listen to them! We need to support individuals in having control over their lives, their healthcare decisions, and their recovery.

Focusing on recovery as local Boards look at moving forward with this BluePrint to have Ohio’s local communities embrace the framework of becoming Recovery Oriented Systems of Care is a recognition that the system must be responsive to individuals, family members, and communities in need of alcohol, drug, and mental health prevention, treatment, and support services. It also recognizes that individuals need help in sustaining their recovery, as recovery is a lifelong process.

We invite you to join us as we move forward helping Ohio embrace becoming a Recovery Oriented System Of Care.
